30mph dream may yet come true

VILLAGERS LIVING on one of the busiest roads in the area are celebrating progress towards a long-awaited speed reduction to 30mph after years of persistent campaigning.

Bordesley Matters residents' group has been pushing for this change for many years and this year gained the support of West Mercia Police and Crime Commissioner John Campion after he walked with residents on the road to experience the problems for himself.

Then last month a key meeting took place between Bordesley Matters residents Karen Kilbride and Alan Bailes (also a district councillor), the new MP Bradley Thomas, the Deputy Police and Crime Commissioner and county councillor Marc Bayliss and the county highways director Jon Fraser. The meeting focused on finalising the speed reduction process, which was supported by the county nearly two years ago but never implemented.

During the meeting, it was agreed that the county would now begin the necessary work to implement the speed reduction, starting with the creation of technical drawings and a consultation period.

Coun Bailes said: "This is a crucial victory for our community. We are grateful for the support of local officials and look forward to seeing these promises turned into action."

'Ghetto estate' go-ahead

A VILLAGE is to have an estate of 34 "affordable" homes imposed on it by a planning inspector despite fears it could lead to "ghettoisation".

The application for the site in the Green Belt in Hopwood has twice been rejected by councillors representing villagers' interest.

But now an appeal against the refusal to give planning permission has been upheld by the Planning Inspectorate, based more than 80 miles away in Bristol.

The plans for the site by the main roundabout in Hopwood were originally supported by Bromsgrove District Council's paid planning officers in the face of public opposition, but members of the elected planning committee still gave it short shrift.

They feared that the estate, to be entirely homes for rent run by a housing association, could lead to the "ghettoisation" of residents in need of lower cost accommodation.

They felt affordable housing worked best when mixed with market housing.

They also expressed serious doubts about the sustainability of the scheme, given its distance from facilities and the shortage of local public transport.

The site has a long history of rejected or withdrawn planning applications and its claimed status as "previously used" through the storage of shipping containers has long been disputed by Alvechurch Parish Council.

This status was, however, accepted by the inspector after her visit to Hopwood. She said she believed the site to be "completely developed" and while the new housing would cause "significant" harm to the openness of the Green Belt, it would not be classed as "substantial"

These are technical planning definitions allowing her to rule that the Green Belt protection could be overlooked.

She also – in what is thought to be the first time Bromsgrove's lack of a five-year housing supply has been used to support building in the Green Belt – cited this shortage as being sufficient to overrule the Alvechurch Neighbourhood Plan's policy of not allowing building outside the village "envelope".

The planning inspector turned the Bromsgrove councillors' objections about a lack of public transport on their head by suggesting that the residents living there would increase demand for, and therefore make more sustainable, better transport services.

She noted in her ruling: "Given the tenure would be socially rented homes for those in housing need, it is my view that these residents would be likely to use the bus services more so than residents purchasing market housing.

"This is because, based on the evidence before me, they are less likely to have access to a private car. Indeed, this could secure a continued future for bus services in the area as the patronage is likely to be increased."

Summing up, in comments which may be surprising to locals, the inspector said: "The proposal would deliver 34 affordable homes to people in housing need, in an area where the delivery of affordable housing has been woeful. It would also re-use previously developed land. These benefits are significant.

"It would also help to sustain existing community facilities, improve public transport and deliver economic benefits. These would be of benefit to the wider community and weigh heavily in favour of the proposal."

Meanwhile, Bromsgrove's planners are reworking the emerging district local plan to work out where they can fit an estimated 9,000 new homes between now and 2041 a rise from 3,500 since Government changed hands.

45 minutes stuck in a station lift

NETWORK RAIL has been urged to investigate how a villager became stuck in station lifts for up to 45 minutes when the doors didn't open even-though it had reached ground level.

The pensioner has vowed to always use the stairs at Alvechurch station in future, despite currently finding walking difficult, asking what would have happened if the door mechanism's constant attempts to open had caused a fire.

He told how it was constantly active, opening the door only a few centimetres three times a minute for 45 minutes until an engineer arrived to switch it off and crow-barred the doors open.

District councillor Alan Bailes has now contacted Network Rail seeking answers as to how this could have happened.

■ More than 30 villagers went to the latest Network Rail consultation session to be told that the Barnt Green station lifts project is "on track".

Parish council chairman Robert Cholmondeley said: "Everything is ticking along OK and we suggested they do another session for the residents later in the autumn." Work is expected to start in early January and will be completed in August 2025.

Panels plan

PLANS HAVE been revealed for a 176-acre solar farm across a vast swathe of village farmland.

The "Oak Valley Energy Park" would stretch from Weatheroak Hill over the fields either side of Icknield Street all the way down to the M42.

The company behind the project, Exagen, is in the consultation phase over its plans to create the facility with a 40-year lifespan and coming online towards the end of this decade.

Picture/Keith Woolford

THE SOCIAL EATS food and music festival in Barnt Green's Bittell Road playing fields (above) ran more smoothly this year with no complaints received by the parish office.

The pouring rain may have reduced the noise and numbers, parish chairman Robert Cholmondeley said, as he recommended the parish council give the go-ahead to a repeat event next year.

The organisers have asked for Saturday September 6 2025, but the council is first checking with the Blackwell Music Festival to make sure the dates don't clash as they did this year.

Scooter vapers

POLICE are concerned over reports of children on electric scooters and bikes travelling around a village offering to sell vapes to other children.

PC Stuart Head told Alvechurch Parish Council: "If anyone knows the identity of these children, I would be very interested. I don't believe they are from the village."

Coun Keith Wiseman said he had heard the vapes were initially being offered for free.

Santa secured

BARNT GREEN has secured a Santa for the village's Christmas lights switch-on this year after the "debacle" last year when councillor Charlie Hotham had to buy a red suit and stand in as Father Christmas.

Parish clerk Eleanor Choudry told councillors: "Father Christmas is confirmed." She said she had also booked Arrow Valley Brass band and would be asking Village Vineyards to run a refreshments tent again for the event on Saturday November 30.

Last cafe standing

ENTERPRISING management at the Old Rose & Crown Hotel have been quick to tell Lickey Hills visitors that there is still a place to get coffee and cake in the beauty spot, despite the current closure of the cafe at the visitor centre.

A banner has appeared outside the venue on Rose Hill (below) declaring: "The only cafe open on the Lickey Hills."

Meanwhile, the Lickey Hills Society has pointed out that the reduction in ranger numbers caused by Birmingham City Council's financial crisis is down from 32 to 20 across all the city's parks and there will only be four rangers based at the Lickeys.

Aled 'on the case'

ALVECHURCH Parish Council is writing to Conservative county councillor Aled Luckman asking for assistance on a number of matters after he did not attend nor submit a report to their September full council meeting, which parish chairman Marc Worrall said was "disappointing".

Coun Luckman told The Village he had been travelling and attending to family matters. He was now "back on the case".

The place to live: Lickey!

"IT IS the new Alderly Edge – it's the place to live," Barnt Green parish chairman Robert Cholmondeley declared over reports that England footballer Jude Bellingham, originally from Stourbridge, is building two homes in the area.

Coun Cholmondeley said he had been approached by a journalist from The Daily Mail about it and, when told the development was on Plymouth Road, he pointed out that was actually in Lickey and not Barnt Green.

Lighting up Barnt Green

TWO new designs have been selected to join the much-loved collection of Barnt Green Christmas lights. The eclectic mix of colurful lights have been designed by children over the years and currently include a snowman and a penguin.

St Andrew's First School ran a competition in the summer, where the lucky winners would have their imaginative creation turned into lights to hang along the high street for all villagers to enjoy over Christmas.

The winning entries were selected from a large number of fantastic designs from the first school pupils.

Lights on: Abigail and Dylan show off their winning entries.

Abigail Gordon, aged eight, who designed a beautiful angel, and Dylan Grassby, aged five, with his colourful turkey, were delighted to have won the competition and said they were excited to see their lights up in the village.

The lights hang from lampposts along Hewell Road, and will be erected later this year to celebrate the festive season.

Barnt Green's Christmas lights switch-on will be held on November 30 when villagers will be able to see the new designs in pride of place.

A helping hand to fight cancer

BRIDGE clubs across the country joined forces in September to raise money to fight cancer, though their annual Cafe Bridge events.

The annual Barnt Green Café Bridge joined in with the Festival of Bridge, initiated by the English Bridge Union, in aid of Cancer Research UK.

Players travelled between various venues, around Barnt Green, playing a few hands of bridge in each.

Richard Jephcott co-ordinated a number of events across the county, including Barnt Green.

Richard said: "The Festival has provided an opportunity to bring the whole bridge-playing community together.

"There are two bridge clubs in Barnt Green, two in Burcot and one in Bromsgrove as well as many others across the whole country. They've all contributed to raising funds for Cancer Research and the Barnt Green event alone raised more than £1,100."

The successful event finished with a drink in the Victoria Inn, and a prize-giving, presented by village triathlete and cancer survivor Sam Boswell.

THE West Midlands Peaky Blinders group surprised and entertained villagers with their appearance in traditional 1920s era clothing. 12 members visited Alvechurch to spend time on a barge at the marina, and visited five of the village's pubs, starting with a drink at The Weighbridge. After touring the pubs, the group ended at The Red Lion. A member of the group said: "Lots of locals enjoyed seeing the group around the village. This will be an annual meet up now and we look forward to 2025 already."
Anyone interested in joining or learning more about what they do can find the group on Facebook at West Midlands Peaky Blinders.

NATIONAL AWARDS FINALISTS FOR KING'S

King's Worcester has been recognised for its outstanding co-educational provision for the third consecutive year in the prestigious Independent School of the Year Awards 2024.

THE school has been named a finalist in the Co-educational Independent School of the Year category, standing alongside esteemed schools such as Millfield, Ibstock, and Ballard.

Notably, King's Worcester is, once again, the only Midlands school to reach the finals in this Co-educational category.

The Independent School Awards showcase the very best of independent education in the UK, celebrating extraordinary pupil experiences over the past year. With more than 1,000 entries from independent schools nationwide, being named a finalist is a significant achievement.

Earlier in July, both King's Worcester and King's Hawford were shortlisted in multiple categories. This latest recognition adds to a series of accolades for King's Worcester, including being listed for the second year in The Sunday Times Top 10 West Midlands Independent Secondary School league and top 30 in the UK for sport. These honours come on the heels of a fantastic set of GCSE and A-Level results this summer.

Being shortlisted for these national awards and appearing alongside some of the UKs largest and highly reputable independent schools reflects the hard work and dedication of both staff and pupils.

The winners of the Independent Schools of the Year 2024 Awards will be announced at an awards ceremony in October.

Jumping for joy: King's Worcester is delighted to have been recognised for outstanding education for a third consecutive year.

So, I'll walk which way?

Dear Editor – I guess at my age I shouldn't be surprised by anything any more.

However, the comment about walking along Sandhills Green between Alvechurch and Barnt Green attributed by county councillor Adrian Kriss in the September 2024 issue of The Village to his highways engineers managed to achieve that in spades.

The thought that I "should not be walking under there" must be one of the most silly comments made to The Village in decades

My family has lived in Sandhills Green for more than 50 years, but it would seem now that because of the lack of pedestrian access I now have only three options:

1. Sell my house and move to a "safer" location.
2. Never leave my driveway except in a car.
3. Never leave my driveway, full stop.

Maybe Coun Kriss can propose which of the above is best suited to my needs.

If No. 1, can I expect assistance from the county council to cover the costs of moving?

If No. 2, will the county council offset, in some way, the increased emissions as a consequence of my extra car miles?

If No. 3, can Coun Kriss suggest ways that I can a) get to work and b) manage my life and that of my family whilst avoiding to consequences of 1 and 2 above?

I also despair at the extremely low level of basic literacy in the local population. . . It would seem that the simple words "Road Closed" during the current gas renewal works is beyond the comprehension of a surprisingly large number of drivers!

Brooke Davis, Sandhills Green

There's only one danger on route

Dear Editor – Regarding your article "Danger Route" (in issue #247 last month), I am writing to find out what is so dangerous about the route between Barnt Green and Alvechurch via Sandhills Green?

Are there steep drops, falling rocks, poisonous snakes, gangs of thieves, radioactive waste, live munitions, wild bears, torrents of water…?

What possible blight has made this quiet country lane so dangerous that the public "should not walk along it"?

Martin Ball, Alvechurch

Lamb set for pastures new

Dear Editor – I want to express with no less than a well poured pint's worth of sadness my regret that Mr Chris Lamb will be casting off from The Weighbridge pub for one final time soon.

The Weighbridge is really the area's only throwback public house, yet to be fully taken over and homogenized into another chain establishment serving the same beers and trying desperately to create an "atmosphere" while simultaneously removing any sense of one.

I really hope that they are able to find a new publican with the passion and care that Mr Lamb obviously put into the place. I do also however – as a father of two young children myself – completely understand his decision to work in a profession that will provide him more time with his family.

A parent only gets to see their children grow up once. No job could ever compete with such an experience.

I love being in a good pub, as I am sure many readers do likewise, however I cannot imagine many worse jobs than running one. Hard work and late nights... no wonder Mr Lamb has called time gentlemen, please.

I raise a glass to him and his new adventures.

Seb Joy, Cofton Hackett

It takes a village

Dear Editor – My daughter Anna is probably well known to most people in Alvechurch as she has Down's Syndrome and likes to walk and sing with her headphones on!

While we were on holiday recently, Anna came to work in Alvechurch from Bromsgrove as usual by taxi and happened to get stranded after the taxi home didn't turn up!

I would like to thank and appreciate most kindly, the efforts that people took to ensure she remained safe.

In particular, The Foot Place, The Co op, The Lounge and Gin and Pickles all lent their support and a special thanks to a friend who talked to Anna and gave her a lift back to her care home in Bromsgrove.

I only found out what happened when I returned and feel grateful that we live in a village as kind and inclusive as Alvechurch.

Gloria Wilson, Alvechurch

New home necessities

Dear Editor – I read with interest the September issue with the title header "9,000 homes needed".

As a resident of Cofton Hackett for 15 years, I've seen the area change with the large developments of new homes, houses and apartments blocks.

I agree more homes are needed – especially affordable – to allow more people to purchase their first home .

My only concern, again, is the infrastructure. It's never mentioned. Oh sure they build a community centre, which is all good but doesn't address the issues such as access to a new doctor's practice or a dentist

WHERE'S VINNY?

FINSTALL First School pupil, Eliza Gough, aged eight, from The Oakalls, shows off the Mini Vinny she won for finding the little creature in September's hunt the hedgehog competition in The Village magazine.

If you want to win one for yourself, you'll need to try to find the little hedgehog hiding somewhere in this magazine (the one shown above is just a guide).

Tell us where he's hiding via email – see details on the bottom of the page opposite – and please include your name, address and phone number, and we'll draw a winner at random.

The closing date is midnight on 10 October 2024. We'll let you know if you've won and you can collect your Mini Vinny from our office – and pose for a photo with your prize!

Have your say . . . about anything!

which people could actually afford. Maybe the people in power (who sit in their mini government making decisions that affect all of us who call this place home) could look at the infrastructure first, and ask themselves "can an area that is already creaking under the weight of demand cope with more homes but with no improvement to the local infrastructure before they are built?"

Neil Mortiss, Cofton Hackett

Going nowhere

Dear Editor – Here we go again (Initiative aims to kick-start village centre The Village July/August 2024): another quango paid for, I assume, by the council tax payer to produce an irrelevant document to gather dust on the shelf.

Rather like that produced in the 1960s by a planning consultant to revitalise Alvechurch and my sketches of 20 years ago, more evidence of broken Britain.

So the only item on any agenda is date of next meeting?

David Barton, Weatheroak

My silent garden

Dear Editor – Some time ago, I wrote an article titled: "Where Have All the Small Birds Gone?" in The VIllage.

Since then, I've transformed my garden to mimic a hedgerow, added feeders, and even a pond, all in hopes of attracting small birds.

Initially, I had plenty of jackdaws, magpies, and pigeons, and I wondered if they were driving the small birds away.

However, during the last National Bird Count, my garden was alive with robins, blackbirds, hedge sparrows, long-tailed tits, great tits, blue tits, and nesting sparrows and wrens.

I had to refill my four large feeders every other day because the garden was full of birdsong, and I enjoyed the company of my feathered friends. But about a month ago, everything changed. The birds vanished – small and large alike. The sky is now eerily silent.

I recently noticed a dozen dead pigeons near the junction of Tanyard Lane and the main road by the pub. Even the dovecote at the house on the corner was quiet.

Does anyone have any idea what's happening? Could it be bird flu? A few birds still visit the garden, but none seems to stay for long. I'd appreciate any insights!

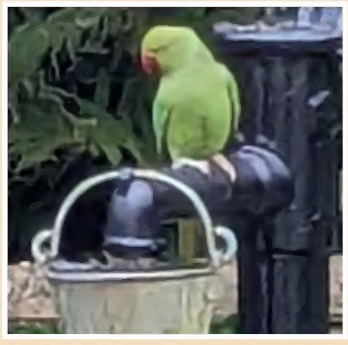
Editor's Note: We passed this on to our Village birding correspondent, who has been inspired to answer this question in their article this month. The Anonymous Birder explains more on page 35.

Parakeet patrol

Dear Editor – Having lived in Alvechurch for more than 40 years, and enjoying the large variety of birds who visit our garden we were very surprised to receive a visit from a parakeet during the month of August (pictured, below).

The parakeet appeared quite at home enjoying the sunflower seeds and has also been spotted in Withybed.



K & J Stirrup, Alvechurch

Editor's Note: Our Anonymous Birder will be back next month to answer this in their column.

Who's at the back door, deer?

Dear Editor – A gang of young Roe deer has been visiting our garden in Bordesley most of the days in the morning (pictured, below).

Alex Nowek, Bordesley

25 YEARS OF CARING

A luxury all-inclusive care home in Bromsgrove has celebrated their General Manager's 25th anniversary working in care.

Burcot Grange and Lodge, which is part of the Berkley Care Group, celebrated Victoria Osborne's 25th anniversary working at the care home with two special events.

The special occasions brought together colleagues, residents, and families to honour her commitment and contributions to the home.

Vicky began working at Burcot Grange and Lodge while volunteering for her Duke of Edinburgh Award.

Since then, she has worked in various departments at the home, including housekeeping, kitchen assistant, and as a carer. Her dedication and hard work have led to her rise through the ranks, ultimately becoming General Manager.

The celebrations began on 1st August with a surprise party at The Lodge. This event was planned a day early to add an element of surprise. The main celebration took place on 2nd August, the actual anniversary date, at The Grange.

Vicky was momentarily diverted to another home to allow for the final preparations. On her return, she was led to believe there was an issue, only to be surprised by everyone gathered in the home's gardens.

The festivities included a two-hour performance by singer, Barry, who entertained the guests with a selection of songs while they enjoyed a variety of drinks. The kitchen team also prepared an array of charcuterie boards and a celebratory cake for the occasion.

Both events were attended by old employees, current team members, residents, and their families, highlighting the impact Vicky has had on the community.

The celebrations were a fitting tribute to her remarkable career and the positive impact she has had on the lives of many. Vicky said: "I am truly overwhelmed and grateful for the surprise celebrations and the outpouring of love and support from everyone.

Congratulations Vicky: Celebrating a milestone achievement.

"These 25 years have been incredibly rewarding and it has been an honour to work with such a dedicated team and wonderful residents.

"I look forward to many more years of service and continuing to make a positive impact in our community."

Burcot Grange and Lodge's Customer Relations Manager, Kiran Chaggar-Smith, said: "We wanted to do something special to mark Vicky's 25 years of incredible service. Her dedication and compassion have touched so many lives, and it was important to us to show our appreciation.

"Organising these surprise celebrations was a joy, and seeing Vicky's reaction made all the effort worthwhile.

"We are grateful for all that she does for us and these celebrations are just a small token of our gratitude for everything she has done and continues to do," said Kiran.

Let her eat cake!

A few words of thanks from Vicky.

RETURN OF THE SCARECROWS

VILLAGERS of all ages are delighted to see the return of Alvechurch Scarecrow Festival this half term.

After a year off in 2023, homemade scarecrows will once again appear back on the streets of the village, all in support of The Lounge and their work in the community.

The event will run from 28 October until 3 November and there are exciting prizes to be won for those making scarecrows, in a range of categories (previous categories have included "Best Scarecrow" and "Best Display").

The Highway Rat: A recreation of the treat-loving rat on Red Lion Street.

JOIN IN THE FUN

If you are interested in making a scarecrow and entering the competition, please sign up by 25 October to be included on the Trail Map.

To register, send a message to the Alvechurch Scarecrow Festival Facebook page with your name, email address, and scarecrow location.

It costs £5 to enter a scarecrow, which can be donated through the festival JustGiving page:

www.justgiving.com/fundraising/alvechurch-scarecrows-2024

Alternatively, you can also register your scarecrow in person at The Lounge.

If you're interested in creating a scarecrow, follow the festival social media for updates and details about free hay/straw collection point for entrants.

As with previous years there will be different categories to enter, where the best scarecrows will take home some fantastic prizes. A spokesperson for the festival said: "We've already received generous prize donations from local businesses, including:

- A free breakfast/lunch for two families at The Lounge,
- A free boiler service from Breeze Hot and Cold Installations
- A free haircut from Barber Dave, a prize from Gin & Pickles,
- A voucher for Ritual,
- A prize from At Home with Lou,
- A prize from Bliss,
- A dance voucher from Amy Greaves School of Dance,
- A voucher for an Indian head massage and yoga from Sofia Well-being,
- A voucher from Drama Tots,
- A cash prize from The Village magazine, and more fantastic prizes to be announced."

VISIT THE SCARECROWS

Maps will be available from 28 October for £2. Note that The Lounge is closed to the public on Mondays due to group activities inside, but maps will be available to buy from Alvechurch Library (cash only), or you can donate £2 via the JustGiving page to receive a digital copy by email or Facebook Messenger.

From 29 October to 1 November there will be a stall outside The Lounge offering maps, cakes, snacks, refreshments, raffle tickets, and more.

All proceeds from the tickets and entries will go to The Lounge to support their fantastic work in the community.

For any questions, please contact the Alvechurch Scarecrow Festival Facebook Page.

Beoley: the haunted inn

THE historic village of Beoley lies between Alvechurch and Redditch. Parts of the village such as St Leonard's Church date back to the 12th century. Even older Icknield Street, a Roman road also runs through Beoley.

Local historian and author, Anne Bradford, whose ghost stories and investigations The Village has featured in the past, writes: There are perhaps more paranormal tales from Beoley than any other small village around.

There's the Beoley goblin, said to jump on the backs of horses when going up the hill, the Beoley charcoal burner who was burned to death and you can still hear his screams when the wind is high.

The Village Inn: A Beoley pub with many ghost stories.

There's the ghost of Beoley vicarage, and a vicar who kept coming back to take the service long after he was dead and buried. Many claim to have seen the apparition of Moses Shrimpton who killed PC Davies on the Icknield Street between Weatheroak and Beoley and there are innumerable accounts of phantoms at the Beoley cross roads.

It's no surprise therefore that The Village Inn, a 19th century coach house which provides traditional pub food today, has it's fair share of stories.

In her book Haunted Pubs and Hotels in and around Worcestershire, Anne published the following account from Angela, the licensee of The Village Inn, (at the time in 2012), who recalled the unexplained phenomena she experienced.

Angela said: So many weird incidents have happened here that I don't take any noticed of them now.

One of the most annoying things is the way that the doors unlock themselves. You carefully lock a door and then a few minutes later you find that it's open. Only two weeks ago I know I locked the side door but a short while later it was swinging open.

The power cuts are a nuisance as well. We're the only building that gets them. I live next door and sometimes the electricity is off here but working in my house and we're on the same system.

In the small room we call "the snug" there are two rows of lights, an upper and a lower. I've known the upper lights go off while the lower lights are still on and they have the same fuse!

The washroom taps turn themselves on and sometimes we find ourselves mopping up a puddle where there is no water supply. I'm always here late at night and I hear all kinds of strange noises upstairs but that could be anything, although one night I did hear footsteps going up the stairs. I went to investigate and no one was there. It doesn't frighten me, I don't find it scary.

The snug seems particularly prone to these strange events. It's often inexplicably hot in here and then suddenly, it will go icy cold. I was sitting in there one day when the leaves of a plant nearby started mysteriously moving around and all the windows and the doors were closed.

Sometimes late at night I switch all the lights off and there's a strange glow coming from the snug. I've no idea why it should be haunted as it's not the old part of the inn and it was built over a pathway.

Some of the locals say that the room was used for the laying out of corpses.

We had a psychic night recently and the participants said they could sense a woman. I wasn't surprised, several customers say that they have felt something walk towards me in the corridor of the snug and I have felt something go past me on the other side of the bar.

Then late one night in January 2012 I actually saw her. She came into the snug from the corridor and moved quickly across the room to the far window. I could see her clearly although she was slightly hazy as if I was seeing her through thin smoke. There was no colour, she was more black and white.

She was wearing a long white apron down to the floor which was quite dirty. She was slightly bent as if she was quite elderly. I only saw her for a few seconds.

The following month I saw a man, also in the snug late at night. He was balding and dressed very smartly white a white collar and a waistcoat.

He looked Victorian. He was just standing there in front of the far window. I was quite taken aback. The most distinctive thing about him was his eyes which were very bright and piercing. He was clearer than the woman and in sepia, not black and white. He was there for a few seconds before he faded away.

I didn't tell anyone because if you say that you have seen a ghost, people think that you're barmy!

Singing in the rain

ALTHOUGH the day of Blackwell Music Festival dawned wet, this year's village festival was fully sold out, and well attended by hardy villagers who didn't let a bit of rain dampen their day (or evening!).

Seven acts entertained the crowds in the field in Blackwell, beginning with Red by Night, a young rock/indie band of four in their mid-teens. Of a similar vintage, The Tysms, fronted by Jack Hodgy, played both original and cover songs.

Next up was bluegrass band; The Folly Brothers playing all manor of instruments like banjo, mandolin, bouzouki, double bass and guitar.

The 50 person strong Got2Sing Choir belted-out well-known numbers, and at one point, during a particularly bad downpour, they offered their rendition of Singing in the Rain.

The headline act The Score had everyone on their feet throughout the rain showers, dancing until they dropped. The group's set included songs from the 50s through to Motown and electro pop, much to the excitement of the crowd.

Event organiser, Emma Westwood, and her team of volunteers said they were over the moon that it went so well, and there were more smiles than ever as people made their way home in the dark.

A towering success

ST Laurence Church, Alvechurch, opened its doors to villagers this September to celebrate Heritage Day, a festival of history and culture across the country.

Visitors of all ages were able to explore the church to a background melodies of "beautiful songs" as one three-year-old villager remarked, played by The Midland Sinfonia. While outside, Alvechurch Morris Men and Aelfgythe Morris group entertained the crowds.

Children (and some older) enjoyed hook-a-duck, lucky dip and other traditional games, and there was also the opportunity to give archery a go.

Brave teddies also tested their confidence, when they were dropped from the roof of the church tower, (with parachutes of course) to float gently to the ground below.

Cakes and refreshments were on sale in The Ark, along with stalls from village organisations including Better Together (senior companionship and concierge), the Scouts, the Little Kitchen Club (who teach little ones skills in the kitchen) and the Amy Greaves School of Dance, who also entertained visitors with performances from their Diddy dancers and solo routines from older dancers.

Members of the Church team with parish councillor Marc Worrall (centre) and Rev Gail Rogers.

The day was a great success, especially as rain held off. One villager said: "The Heritage day was excellent!! My daughter and I were there till the end. We spent the whole day there", while another agreed: "It was so good! Lots of things going on, crafts, music, morris men!"

Celebrations were two-fold on this occasion, as the St Laurence team are also delighted to be the recipients of a grant of £189,000 from The National Lottery Heritage Fund.

This grant will cover two thirds of the cost of necessary work to protect and conserve the church, most importantly, helping with essential work to restore the church tower and clock face.

The tower, which is the oldest part of the church as it currently stands, is in danger of decay and becoming unusable, including the much-loved church bells which Alvechurch residents often hear chime out across the village.

St Laurence Church is a Grade II* listed building, which could also be at risk should the tower and clock face not receive the restoration and care it needs.

By halting the decay, this project aims to safeguard the architectural integrity of the church and retain the historic tower for generations to come.

The Rev Gail Rogers, Vicar of St Laurence, said: "We are thrilled to have received this support from The National Lottery Heritage Fund.

"Thanks to money raised by National Lottery players we can restore and preserve our historic church tower and clock face. Through this we aim to increase community engagement, and ensure the long-term viability of St Laurence Church as both a cultural landmark, a place of worship and a community hub."

Hills are alive with heritage

WHILE the Lickey Hills Country Park was open for visitors to explore during the heritage open weekend in September, the cafe remained closed. Although refreshments were not available, the Warren Lane Visitor Centre was still open for visitors who were able to peruse and learn from the displays, writes Keith Woolford.

The space freed up by the cafe closure, did mean that the Lickey Hills Local History Society were able to make use of it for allowing a variety of local maps, paintings and illustration to be on show. Free booklets, leaflets and postcards were handed out to those visiting.

There were four WWI and WWII walks over the weekend. During the walks, some visitors had the benefit of having Head Ranger Steve Hinton explain the importance of the Hills over these periods. Of particular interest was the quarry, which was specially opened for the heritage open weekend. Guided tours of the Gun Butts also offered a unique perspective.

Visitors had a great time over the weekend, with some commenting: "Very informative and enthusiastic walk with Steve the Ranger – excellent … we learnt a lot" and "Absolutely fabulous". The history society members were delighted with this year's event.

HOW DO YOU WANT TO GIFT: DEAD OR ALIVE?

Martin Pryor explains the different approaches to wealth transfer, and the positive and negative aspects each approach can have on your long-term financial planning.

THE WEALTH TRANSFER DILEMMA

GIVING WITH A COLD HAND

GIVING WITH A WARM HAND

MOST investors' primary motivation for financial planning is to ensure they don't outlive their money.

Disciplined investors, most of whom are supported by a competent and caring financial adviser, can, however, reach a position where it becomes clear that they will never spend all their money in their lifetime.

While this position is a luxury, it is well deserved and can be traced back to their decisions over multiple decades.

Some investors can be convinced to increase their spending on activities and causes that bring them meaning, but many will still die with a sizeable net worth. They are driven by a desire to leave a legacy to those they love, and their wealth becomes a river that will flow to the next generation.

Studies suggest that we will witness one of the most significant wealth transfers in history over the coming decades.

This presents opportunities and challenges for families and raises important questions about how and when to pass on assets.

THE TRADITIONAL APPROACH

For a long time, most families have defaulted to the conventional method of wealth transfer, leaving an inheritance after death.

This approach offers several advantages. It allows investors to maintain control of their assets throughout their lifetime, insuring against unforeseen setbacks or expenses. The extent and cost of future medical care are difficult to predict, and more wealth only means more freedom and opportunities.

However, this traditional model also comes with potential drawbacks.

One significant concern is timing – your heirs may not need the money when they finally receive it, possibly being close to retirement themselves. By waiting until after your passing to transfer wealth, you miss the opportunity to witness and guide the impact of your generosity.

There's something uniquely rewarding about seeing your hard-earned wealth make a difference in your loved ones' lives while you're still here.

Additionally, depending on your jurisdiction, there may be higher estate taxes compared to lifetime giving strategies, potentially reducing the amount your beneficiaries ultimately receive.

The traditional inheritance model offers security and control, but it's important to weigh these benefits against the potential missed opportunities for impact and guidance.

THE "WARM HAND" APPROACH

An alternative to the traditional inheritance model is the "warm hand" approach – giving while you're still alive.

This strategy has gained popularity in recent years as more people recognise the potential benefits of transferring wealth during their lifetime.

One of the most significant advantages is the ability to witness the impact of your generosity firsthand. There's a unique joy in seeing how your financial support can change lives, whether helping a grandchild through college or giving your children a head start with weddings, house purchases or business projects.

The warm hand approach also allows you to provide guidance alongside your gifts. You can share your financial wisdom, helping recipients learn to manage and appreciate the wealth they're receiving.

However, this approach has its challenges. Giving away assets during your lifetime gives you less control over your wealth. You also risk jeopardising your financial security if you give away too much too soon. Ensuring you retain enough assets to support yourself through retirement and potential healthcare needs is crucial.

Many people start by utilising annual gift allowances, which can provide tax benefits while gradually transferring wealth.

Contributing to education costs is another popular option, whether paying school fees or funding a college savings plan.

Some choose to help with major life expenses, such as providing a down payment for a child's first home.

CRAFTING YOUR STRATEGY

Navigating the wealth transfer dilemma often involves not choosing one approach over the other but rather finding the right balance between lifetime giving and traditional inheritance. This balance will be unique to each individual and family based on various factors.

As your financial advisers, we're here to help you understand your options, consider the implications, and create a personalised plan that aligns with your goals and values.

By taking a thoughtful, balanced approach to wealth transfer, you can create a legacy that provides financial support to your loved ones and imparts your values and wisdom to future generations.

It's a powerful way to ensure that your life's work continues to have a positive impact long into the future.

Free up your options

Mark Meads, from Village Financial, explains how equity release can support you, and improve your lifestyle and retirement plans.

I'LL often get asked what are the main reasons for releasing equity from a property, below I have listed some of the common uses:

■ To supplement retirement income: Many retirees find that their pension or savings are not enough to cover their expenses in later life. Equity release can provide a source of additional income that can help them maintain their standard of living.

■ To pay off debts: Equity release can be used to pay off outstanding debts, such as interest only mortgages, credit card balances or loans, which can reduce financial stress and improve cash flow.

■ To make home improvements: Homeowners may choose to release equity in their property to fund home renovations or repairs, which can improve their quality of life and increase the value of their home.

■ To help family members: Some people choose to do equity release to help their children or grandchildren, for example, by providing a deposit for a property purchase or funding education.

■ To go on holiday or travel: Equity release can provide the funds needed to take a dream holiday or travel to new destinations, which can be a rewarding experience for retirees.

■ To maintain independence: Equity release can help older homeowners to stay in their own home and maintain their independence, by providing the funds needed to pay for care or support services.

Mark Meads (above), and his team will help you navigate your equity release options.

Village Financial are here to help with all your mortgage requirements.
To get in touch please call 07730 011897 or email mark.meads@villagefinancial.co.uk

A Lifetime Mortgage will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits and tax status. The impact of not servicing monthly interest payments on a Lifetime Mortgage is that the outstanding debt can grow rapidly, thus reducing the value of your estate. For example, if the interest rate was 7% a year, a £50,000 loan would double to £100,000 after 10 years assuming no repayments are made. This is an example for illustrative purposes only and personalised advice and recommendations should be sought from a qualified professional. You are strongly advised to register a lasting power of attorney. This will allow your affairs to be managed by somebody else if your mental abilities significantly decline.

A wooded view of Withybed and Alvechurch.

TREES OF LIFE

As the leaves change, Mary Green takes a stroll through the trees found around us, and tells us more about our leafy neighbours.

OCTOBER is a good time to look at trees as they prepare for winter. They are an important part of the plant kingdom, distinguished from herbal plants by having woody stems (trunks) which do not die back in winter.

We have dozens of native trees, in twenty-odd families, and this diversity is important as well as the overall number of them.

Most of us think of two kinds of trees, evergreen and deciduous, though these are not really scientific classifications. The latter shed their leaves in autumn. Evergreens shed their leaves too, but gradually through the year.

Many of the evergreens are in a separate class of trees called gymnosperms, which have different kinds of seeds and needle-like leaves. All the other trees are dicotyledonous plants.

Britain has only three native gymnosperms, each in

continues overleaf

a different family: Scots pine, yew and juniper. Only one of these, yew, grows round here naturally, though Scots pines are introduced.

Yew is quite common in old woodland and much planted in churchyards. It can live to a great age and there are examples in Alvechurch, Tardebigge and Cofton churchyards among others which are hundreds of years old. The pink berries are highly poisonous to mammals but not to birds, which don't digest the inner seeds so they pass through.

Scots pines are among many other pines planted round here, distinguished by reddish bark from the others. They have cones and needles. Very little grows on ground under them but they do host some birds like goldcrests and can link with particular fungi like fly agarics. In the wild in Scotland they share the same fungal structure underground as heather and are part of the local ecology.

The only other evergreen native here is holly, our only member of its family. Its berries feed birds (again poisonous to us). Its young growth is the food plant for the holly blue butterfly and the white flowers in May provide nectar. It forms part of the thorny understory of woodland and helps protect growing oaks and other slow growing trees.

The leaves are edible to livestock and used to be cut as a winter feed. (the higher branches generally carry non-spiky leaves, with spikes on the lower one to prevent grazing.)

Holly, like many trees, has separate male and female trees, with only the females carrying the familiar red berries. It plays a huge role in folklore, both pagan and Christian.

All trees are a vital part of the cycle of life that includes us. They take in carbon and store it and give out oxygen for us to breathe. They interact with fungi and host insects and other invertebrates, birds and mammals. They absorb pollutants.

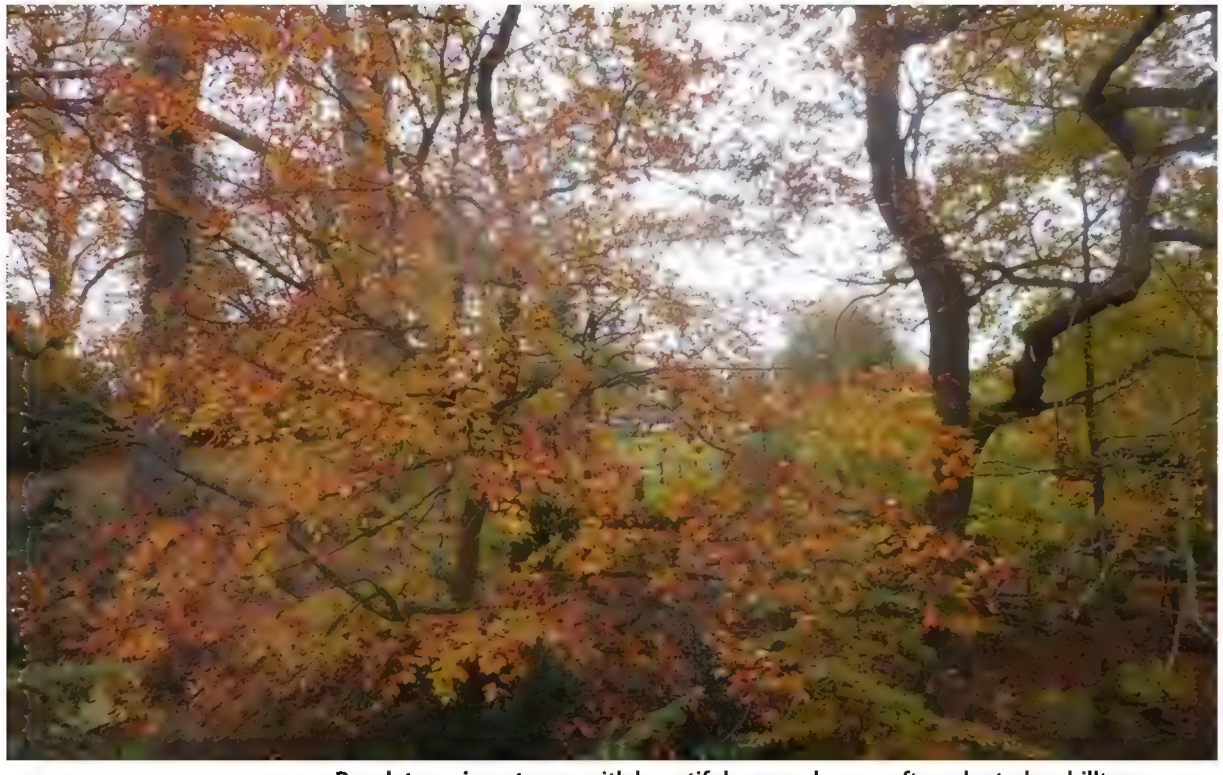
In addition, deciduous trees support a network of plant life, especially spring-flowering herbs.

The countryside round here in earlier times would have been open woodland and remnants of this remain in small woods and lines of hedgerows. Unfortunately, farmers who are stuck in the 20th Century and some Councils flail-cut their hedges and inhibit the growth of trees. More progressive ones now realise, as ancient ones did, the importance of letting the tops of hedges grow into trees – and do all the things described in the last paragraph.

The oak is the dominant tree here and I can walk for half an hour from my house and find oaks over 500 years old and young saplings alike. The UK has more ancient oaks than the rest of western Europe put together.

The predominant kind here is the English oak which hosts thousands of species of other creatures and fosters fungi and herbal growth. They often mark old pathways, like the Salt Path from Alvechurch to Droitwich, or boundaries, like the oaks at the edge of the Bishop's Palace ground in Rowney Green.

Oaks are known to communicate with each other underground and will together in any year produce a bumper crop of acorns (to ensure future growth) or few acorns (to control the population of mammals and birds that feed on them). This looks like being a good year. Like holly, oak figures hugely in folklore.



Beech trees in autumn: with beautiful orange leaves, often planted on hilltops.

In the same family as oak are beech and sweet chestnut. Both grow here but are not so common. Beech likes a more alkaline soil and was planted especially on hilltops (like Frankley Beeches).

They have a nutritious nut (mast) which was fed to animals and occasionally used by humans for oil. Sweet chestnut was not originally a native but came over with the Romans as a food tree and has been here long enough to be thought native.

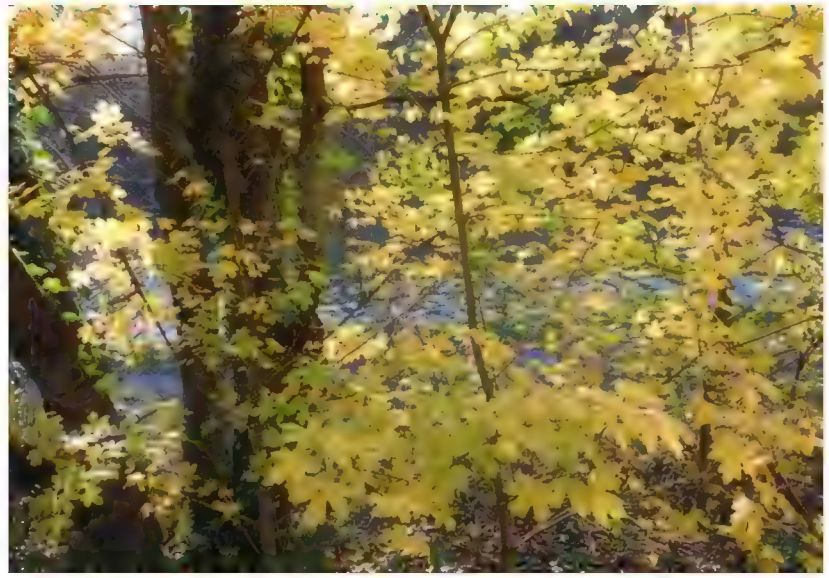
There are some ancient huge chestnuts with their distinctive twisty bark in Piper's Hill wood near Hanbury and scattered ones near Alvechurch. They flower quite late, in July, and produce edible nuts in a good summer. Horse chestnuts (conkers) are a completely different tree from a different family, introduced a coupe of centuries ago but superficially similar with twisty bark and hard brown nuts in prickly cases.

Birch and alder share a family. Alder is common here especially by water. Its interaction with other wildlife is hugely important. It fixes nitrogen in the soil though bacteria, meaning it can grow on poor soil and also help other plants grow.

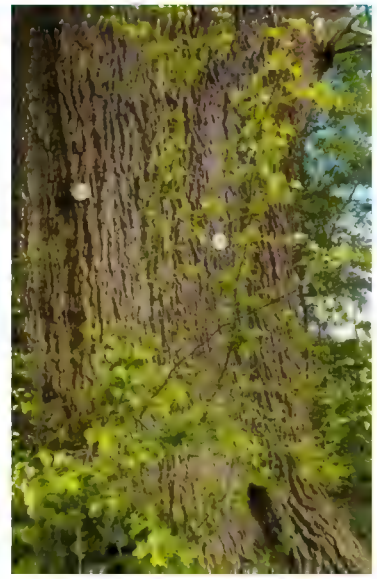
Its leaves feed many moth larvae, its seeds feed birds like goldfinches, and it hosts many mosses and fungi. It is the only deciduous tree that forms cones. Its wood withstands water and was much used in the past for wooden boats, quaysides and clog soles. It also makes charcoal and gunpowder. A green dye was made from it. It's all along the canal here.

Birch is more common in northern and moorland areas, but grows well here too and is a favourite for roadside planting. Its silver bark is well known and persists even after the wood rots. Like alder it hosts many insects and fungi. In mythology it is a tree of purification, and it really does have an effect by attracting nutrients other trees can't and restoring soil health.

All these deciduous trees so far (apart from horse chestnut) are wind pollinated. The have male and female flowers, usually in catkin form for the males, sometimes on the same tree, sometimes different. They can flower early in the year when insects are few. It also means they produce huge amounts of pollen, so contribute a lot to early season hay fever!



Autumn field maple: 'Hand-like' yellow autumn leaves.



An ancient oak stands strong.

A poplar sprouts leaves in spring.

Hazel is another catkin tree, and clearly shows how hard wind pollination can be. Male catkins ("lambs' tails") and tiny red female flowers are on the same tree, but they prefer to pollinate a different tree to spread the genes, so the male and female flowers don't come quite at the same time in the hope of coinciding with another tree!

They're common round here and noticeable because they "self-cop-

pice" - growing in groups of small stems instead of one big trunk.

Hornbeam is in the same family, a very hard wood which slightly resembles a beech tree and has catkins. It grows in some woods here and there is a lovely laid hedge of it in Alvechurch.

Willows, growing by water like alders, are a big catkin-bearing family with many varieties and are mostly wind pollinated.

Crack willow is common here, a short lived and fast-growing tree. Osiers or withies used to be grown for weaving, as in Withybed where I live. Sallows or pussy willows are slightly different as they are insect pollinated and loved by early bees.

Poplars are in the same family and these include the wonderful black poplars usually growing near water, growing very big but easily toppled by storms, like the one in The Meadows in Alvechurch later carved into a snake.

Ash and elm are in different families but both illustrate the complex fate of trees over the last century. Elm was once common here. In the 1960s it was decimated by Dutch Elm Disease, which arrived from abroad (there was a good supply of firewood on my parents' farm for a time!). The disease persists, but so does elm. It's all over the hedges here, often growing up into a proper tree and briefly flowering and fruiting before dying back again. A different variety, wych elm, was more resistant and these are more likely to remain as full trees, though they are less common here.

Until recently ash was a very common tree and grows so readily from seed that it was almost considered a weed. Then came Ash Dieback, a fungal disease again brought in from abroad. It is working its way through our trees, and we can see them gradually disappearing locally. No one is sure yet if some will survive long term.

There are two natives in the Acer or maple family. The very common sycamore is not much liked for some reason but grows well where other trees won't.

Field maple is a common local tree, very beautiful with its conical shape and especially its yellow autumn leaves like little hands. Both were much used for small wooden items, and have winged seeds or "keys" loved by birds and small mammals.

Lime trees are also quite common, especially loved by Victorians, with similar winged seeds.

These are the larger trees you find round here. Smaller ones include elder, wayfaring tree and guelder-rose, all in one family, and spindle, dogwood, and buckthorn in separate ones. One family has currants and gooseberries, another has gorse and broom.

Then there are all our fruit trees in the Rose family that I wrote about in a previous article. Most of these have more obvious flowers and are insect pollinated, followed by berries. This year has been a bit hit and miss for them depending on when they flowered: a cool wet spring meant a lack of pollinators.

Female holly, with bright red berries.

All these trees are also plants for specific insects and fungi. Buckthorn hosts the caterpillars of the yellow Brimstone moth. Spindle has its very own moth, the Spindle Ermine, which forms white webs on the bushes. Gooseberries are pollinated by wasps. Elder has a special fungus, which used to be called Judas' Ear or Jew's Ear following the myth that Judas hanged himself from an elder, but is now called Jelly Ear. Berries poisonous to us are eaten by birds and we eat the ones that aren't.

It doesn't matter if you don't know the names of all these dozens of trees and the 20 families, but it helps to recognise just how diverse they are and how they all interact with plants and animals around them.

A tree is more than just a tree and a wood more than a collection of trees.

■ I wrote this poem some years ago and I still smile when I pass this tree.

Redditch Oak

The town began as an overspill
From the city, back in the boom years
Until the town too is full and spilling
Over this green hill. I saw the plans
And now here it is, the ground torn up
The diggers in, ready for building.
But in the middle, they have left an oak
In its cordon sanitaire. Big, spreading
Now clothed in bright green, outlandish
In this morning's spring mud. I worry
They haven't left enough space round it
For its roots, which will have spread wide -
Will be under the houses and pretty gardens
Growing, talking and troubling people's dreams.

The anonymous birder

How to enjoy village birdlife

WHERE HAVE ALL THE BIRDS GONE?

THIS month's birding feature was inspired by a letter sent to The Village, from one of our readers, (see page 14 for said letter), who asked the question: "Where have all the small birds gone?"

The letter raises several interesting points, so some thoughts on what may be happening.

A good starting point may be to classify what a small bird is. Over half of all birds are known as Passerines or "perching" birds; these are birds which have three toes facing forward and one facing backwards, hence the ability to perch.

It's not just small birds which fall into this group, however, the crow family are perchers too. Interestingly woodpeckers aren't passerines due to their two-forward two-back toe arrangement.

Sometimes people are referring to songbirds too, so for the purposes of this article, it might be easier to refer to "garden birds" of whatever size and perching ability.

They will certainly be attracted by providing food, in addition to that which they find naturally (as discussed in the August issue of The Village). The increased numbers of visitors in the winter, will be because there is less natural food available (look out for the RSPB garden watch, which is in January).

A pond is also beneficial (if not frozen) for drinking, washing and contributing to some food sources as the weather warms.

Adding hedgerow plants will provide nesting sites and food when well developed, but birds, and all organisms in the natural food chain, depend on a large joined-up habitat to make a real difference to their population. So if all of us do something to encourage them, or even not discourage them, it is more likely to have an impact.

During the spring, garden birds will be pairing up and mating. Birdsong for claiming territories and pairing up will naturally signal their presence.

As spring rolls into summer, broods are being raised and furious feeding activity again keeps visibility high.

So what does happen in late summer when the birds certainly do keep a low profile?

With breeding over and offspring fledged, there is no need to attract a mate or defend territory so song and display are no longer required.

Birds also need to recover and renew their feathers after the rigours of raising young. This can render them flightless for a period so they do not want to advertise their whereabouts and keep a low profile in the verdant summer foliage.

A recent question posed on a local on a Facebook group asked: "Where are all the male ducks?" The answer to that. . . they are in what is known as eclipse plumage in late summer where they are growing new feathers and just need to blend in for a while.

While the larger birds will predate smaller birds, raiding nests –and in the case of woodpeckers, breaking in to nest boxes, they will co-exist with the song/smaller birds, and increasing predator numbers often indicates greater numbers of available prey rather than less.

As for bird flu, it seems to affect sea birds, geese and poultry more than garden birds at present.

So just sit tight and as autumn arrives and the leaves fall, the birds will emerge with pristine new plumage, flocking together in feeding parties, coming together to roost – safety and warmth in numbers.

If you go out on a crisp autumn morning you may witness the migrating birds stopping off in our gardens, parks and countryside on their journey back to warmer climes to feed for the winter.

Redwings and Fieldfares from Scandinavia will add to the winter population, visiting our gardens for berries and fruit.

Robins have started singing their wistful winter song that they use to keep rivals away from their feeding ground.

As the natural food sources decline the birds will return to garden feeders in ever increasing numbers and so the cycle begins again.

There is no doubt that bird numbers are generally declining for a number of reasons, colonies of house sparrows bereft of food sources and nesting sites are a noticeable example, but the quiet time of late summer for birds has always been a period in the natural calendar.

ROWNEY GREEN IN BLOOM

VILLAGERS were given the chance to show off their green fingers, among other crafts and skills, at this year's annual Flower and Produce show, run by Rowney Green Horticultural Society.

Held in Rowney Green village hall, the entries to the various categories were laid out for the judges on the morning of the show.

The back room held the Arts, Crafts and Photography sections – a nice addition to the principal competition.

The event saw a good attendance of competitors, families and visitors, and special guest presenter Professor Sir Keith Porter congratulated all the winners, handing out trophies and certificates. Sir Keith was the civilian lead for the care of injured soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Rowney Green Horticultural Society chairperson Pat Davies said the day was "fantastic for our annual event, especially as we are celebrating our 80th show. We were privileged to have local resident Sir Keith with us and who was so personable with everyone he met."

A full list of the winners can be found on the society's website: www.rowneygreenhorticultural.co.uk

NEGATIVELY BRIGHT

Amateur astronomer Brian Watkiss peers into the Village night sky.

Images courtesy of NASA.

OCTOBER brings with it those chillier days and darker evenings but it means we can start skywatching earlier.

This October could prove to be very special as we just might possibly see a bright comet.

Now, I don't usually report comets but this one is unusual. Its name is (wait for it. . . !) C/2023 A3 Tsuchinshan-ATLAS and is known to be quite large and will pass fairly close to Earth during the month.

There were fears that it was about to break up as it approached the Sun but it seems to be holding together and – if it stays in one piece – will be at its closest on the 12th when it could have a brightness of zero.

That's right, zero. Let me explain. . . back in ancient history, the first stars to appear in the evening were given a brightness of one and the next ones two and so on. Then scientists later did some sums and made the scale start at zero.

Looking towards the southwest, high, almost overhead in our evening skies, the first star you will see will probably be Vega. Sure enough, this has a brightness or magnitude of zero.

As the sky darkens, Deneb will appear to its left with a magnitude of around one, to be joined by the other member of the Summer triangle, the slightly brighter Altair below. Lower down, towards the sunset in the west, the star Arcturus will appear which is also of magnitude zero but the glare of the Sun makes it harder to see.

Towards the end of the month, Venus will appear in the glow of sunset but only briefly each evening before it, too, sets just after the Sun. Being the brightest planet, Venus has a magnitude of minus four because planets weren't allowed for in the original scale. As a matter of interest, the Sun has a magnitude of –26 so don't look at that.

Our comet, when it appears out of the sunset on the 12th won't actually look as bright as Vega because stars are a point source of light whereas a comet is a bit of a fuzzy blob but it may be visible just below and to the left of Arcturus.

Start looking as soon as the Sun has disappeared at about 6.20pm. It will be visible for days after but will get less bright so look for it as soon as you can.

One object that is visible is Saturn, the strangest and loveliest planet when seen through a telescope and NASA has recently released some Hubble images showing how the angle of its rings changes during its orbit. It can be found below the Great Square of Pegasus, over in the south east. A really bright gibbous Moon will be close by on the 14th.

This is a good time of year to look out for the International Space Station which can have a magnitude of up to minus four so look out for it on heavens-above.com. It, too, is in the news at the moment because it has two extra people on board who were due to stay for eight days and now have to stay for eight months after their spacecraft had to leave without them.

My wife is concerned they may not have enough food and clean underwear!

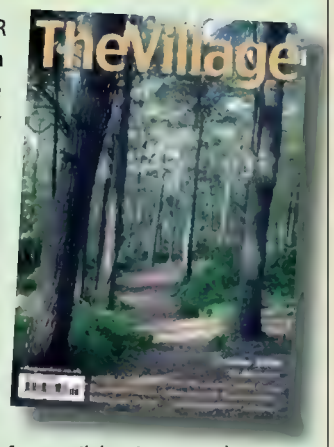
20 From The Village archive Years Ago

OUR OCTOBER 2004 cover showed a seasonal scene of the woods above Lickey Visitor Centre.



IN THE NEWS: A plan had been hatched to build a link road from the M42 at Hopwood to the Longbridge car plant, the redundant parts of which were already destined for retail, business and residential use. A consortium had been set up to look at the options, but Bromsgrove district councillor Jean Luck told Alvechurch Parish Council the road would "devastate the countryside and the area."

Meanwhile, the protest against plans for a rendering plant at Hopwood was gathering momentum, with a series of public meetings across the area.

BLACKWELL AT last had a village school bearing its name, as Linthurst First School in St Catherine's Road became Blackwell First School. The school also had a new logo designed by pupil Ella Smith-Carrington, pictured with Nathan Aktar and Nicholas Sfantzis.

ALVECHURCH youngster Courtney Hyde had set her sights on the 2012 Olympics after winning the British Youth Modern Pentathlon Championships. The 12-year-old beat 18 other girls across the five events: fencing, swimming, shooting, horse riding and cross country running.

10 From The Village archive Years Ago

OUR OCTOBER 2014 cover featured a young visitor to The Meadows in Alvechurch captivated by the serpent, newly carved by artist Andy DeComyn from a fallen black poplar. Out of picture was a giant apple carved from the same tree.

CHEQUE IN: Parish councillor David Matthews, Picnic in the Park committee member Louise Parkinson and parish councillor Natalie Wise present a cheque to Sally Meredith and Dean Morgan of The Lounge youth project in Alvechurch. The £558 was half the total raised by that year's picnic.

DUCKY DILAPIDATION: Clearance of the balancing pond at The Oakalls revealed the dire state of the duckhouse built by a resident ten years previously. District councillor Caroline Spencer appealed for residents to come to the ducks' aid by designing and building a new one.

SNAIL MAIL FAIL ALVECHURCH parish councillors voted against a plan to bring their communications into the digital age and all all council paperwork, including minutes and agendas, would continue to be printed out and sent out to councillors by post.

EVENTS

THE MIDLAND SINFONIA will re-start at 7.30pm on 5th October at St Laurence Church Alvechuch. Church go on a run

ALVECHURCH FC shrugged off disappointment at being dumped out of the FA Cup by chalking up three 1-0 league victories taking the team to the top of the table.

Hopes of repeating the 2022-23 FA Cup run were snuffed out in Leicestershire on the last day of August, but this was followed by three victories in seven days.

First off was an away win at Hitchin Town when talismanic striker Dan Sweeney pounced on a pin-point cross from Dylan Allen-Hadley and buried the ball in the net.

Next up was a local derby at Redditch United when Allen-Hadley scored on six minutes after a Omari Sterling-James free kick had flicked off a defensive head, leaving the Church man with time and space to curl a shot into the top corner of the net.

The coup de grace as far as table position was concerned came with the visit by Halesowen Town and both teams knowing the winner would end the day in top spot in the Southern League Premier Division Central.

It was, understandably, a tight tussle and the first-half stalemate came as no surprise.

The second half was going the same way until, with just six minutes remaining, teenager Dan Shaw, a late substitute, showed composure and no small amount of technical ability to curl a 20-yard effort into the top corner.

The game probably needed a moment of magic to break the stalemate, and Shaw, only signed on a month's loan from Blackburn Rovers the day before, did not disappoint.

So, with three successive 1-0 wins taking them to the summit as The Village went to press, minds were already turning to the next two matches, both at home and both against play-off place contenders Stamford and Stourbridge.

This will be a key time for Church to prove their mettle against the best in the division.

New signings

AS WELL as bringing aboard Dan Shaw, Alvechurch FC re-signed goalkeeper Ronnie Hollingshead. Ronnie made a massive impression on the club last season while on loan from West Bromwich Albion, before returning to the club at the end of the season.

The deal was for an initial month loan and in the three games he has played so far, Ronnie is yet to concede a goal, as the side secured their three consecutive one-nil victories.

Kieran's double

FORWARD Kieran Wakefield won both the player of the month and goal of the month award for August with his wonder strike to secure a victory away at Royston Town.

Remembering Ray

IN MEMORY of lifelong Alvechurch supporter Ray Lloyd, a charity match has been arranged between an Alvechurch FC supporters XI and an Alvechurch FC old boys XI.

It will be played on September 29 2024 at Lye Meadow. Kick-off is at 2pm with gates opening at 1pm and food and drink available.

A spokesman said: "This is a fantastic opportunity to support both a wonderful gentleman and a lifelong supporter of Alvechurch.

■ Alvechurch have been drawn away to Evesham Utd in the first round of the Worcestershire FA Senior Cup, a repeat of last season's final, to be played week commencing Oct 7th.
